The screenshot shows a web application interface with a blue header bar containing a hamburger menu icon and the text "Company Name". Below the header, the main content area is titled "Dashboard Overview".

Under "Dashboard Overview", there is a "Select Role" section with a text input field containing the word "Verifier". This field is circled in red. A yellow callout box points to this field with the text: "In this case, there should not be any pre-selection done, rather it should ask for selection of appropriate user role first".

Below the "Select Role" section, there are two dropdown menus: "Select Company" with the value "Pro Client - 1" and "Select Location" with the value "Noida". Below these is a blue "GO" button.

At the bottom of the page, there is a grey notification bubble with a green checkmark icon and the text "Please select Manager or Verifier". This bubble is also circled in red. A yellow callout box points to this bubble with the text: "Why does it ask this message?? It should be 'Please select your User Role'". A red arrow points from the "Verifier" input field to this notification bubble.
